Credit score checks are a mandatory step when borrowers apply for an unsecured loan, such as a personal loan. Whether they apply on the personal loan app or offline at the bank, this step is part of the evaluation process to ensure that the applicant can service the loan and is likely to repay the loan on time.

Therefore, it makes sense for users to check their credit score beforehand and ensure it is high. This helps increase their chances of smooth approval and receiving a high-value loan. With the OneScore App, potential applicants do not need to guess or worry about their creditworthiness before applying for a loan.

Using this simple mobile application, anyone can easily check their score in minutes. If their score is good enough, then they have the best chance to get hassle-free approval. In case the score is not sufficient, the app offers personalised solutions to achieve the score required.

Why Lenders Rely on Credit Scores for Personal Loans

Personal loans aren't backed by collateral, which is why lenders are more strict about borrowers having a good credit score. This 3-digit number represents the borrower's creditworthiness. A high score of 730 or more indicates good credit management skills.

On the other hand, a low score shows that the borrower may not have much experience with credit or have a history of late payments, defaults, or overutilisation. So, applicants with a low score may not be able to get a personal loan.

Checking the score beforehand can help consumers avoid wasting time and getting rejected for loans.

Some loan apps may give potential borrowers a loan at a lower score, but their interest rates are generally higher to mitigate the risk of default. Therefore, the better option is to have a high score and then apply with a trustworthy lender. OneScore doubles up as a personal loan app, too.

The interest starts at affordable rates of 12.5% per annum. Plus, the loan is offered by top Indian financial institutions such as Federal Bank, South Indian Bank, and Kisetsu Saison Finance India.
